LONDON, Aug. 15.—The result of the Norwich election is a crushing blow to the conservatives and dissidents, who were confident that they would retain the seat. At their clubs the news was received with consternation. Home rule clubs and centers were correspondingly elated a week ago. The conservative Standard said that the issue would be a trial of strength under peculiarly significant circumstances, and peculiarly significant circumstances, and pointed out that though, Mr. Brunner was a large local employer, his opponent was a member of an old Cheshire family that had been seated in the country for centuries, and had special claims for support of every this how.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade, during the past week, says: With the exception of a few slight showers the drouth has not been broken in the greater portion of the country; the days have been 15 degrees cooler and the nights are autumnal. Vegetation appears to be given out. The wheat deliveries have been numerous. Values continue to decline.

There was a fair sized crowd in all the pits or change today, though the bulk of the speculative ousiness seemed inclined to continue centering in corn. The market for that cereal was rather unsettled and irregular, ruling active at times and at others quiet. Trading was of a fair volume, and centered chiefly in the May option. Sains reported in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois tended to create an easier feeling and prices the first hour of trading tended downward under rather free realiz-ing, but later ruled firm under less pressure to sell. The quantity in store there decreased 20 10 bushed the past week, bringing the total stock instore down to 1,720,000 bushels and the visible supply decreased 507,000 bushels. This together with the Illinois agricultural report that the late rains had not done much good to the crop had a tendency to steady the market. The market opened at leaster fower than

FOR THE HOT SEASON.

Machine Which Turns Out a Glass of Soda for a Tenth of a Cent. A portable apparatus has recently been instructed by which soda water can be refuced in cost from twelve cents to three cents a gallon. It has three cylinders, respectively for gas, water and prepared soda water. The gas cylinder, which holds twenty-two pounds of liquefied carbonic acid, is narrow, but enormously strong, being capable of resisting a pressure of 7,000 pounds to the square inch without bursting. When empty it can be taken apart from the rest of the machine and recharged where the carbonic acid gas is con-densed. Charged cylinders may also be obtained from the natural gas wells on the banks of the Rhine in Europe. The middle cylinder is made like an ordinary hot water reservoir, and holds about sixty gallons of Croton water. It withstands a pressure of 150 pounds to the square inch. The third cylinder is simply an ordinary soda water drum, such as may be seen about stores where aerated waters are sold on draught. The process of liquefying or solidifying carbonic acid gas is becoming an important in-dustry. Many volumes of the gas are dustry. pumped into a small chamber, which is kept under a freezing mixture, until condensation and liquefaction is produced. Until lately it has been used chiefly for adding gas to lager beer and for causing intense cold in the laboratory; but fresh uses are being constantly found for it.

Chemists who manufacture their own soda water prepare this gas from marble dust, which is a carbonate of lime, and sulphuric acid. The gas is then forced under pressure into a cylinder containing water, which is then rolled about until the gas and water are thoroughly mixed, when the carbonated water constitutes the soda water of commerce. Many chemists have abandoned this process, and get their soda water ready made from the wholesale manufacturer.

By the new process a cylinder of liquefied carbonic acid gas is capable of turning out 250 gallons of soda water. The gas passes from the first cylinder into a small chamber where the pressure which is required for the remainder of the manufacture is regulated. It is about seventy-five pounds to the square s 20 40 inch. The gas is then divided into two streams; one being admitted into the top of the second or water cylinder, while the other passes into a chamber through several inectors. A pipe runs from the bottom of the water evlinder to this chamber, and as the gas rushes through the fine nozzles of the injectors it draws the water with it past a valve. The gas and water are by this time mixed, but in order that they may become com-pletely so a small turbine wheel obstructs pletely so a small turbine wheel obstructs their course in such a way that they are thoroughly incorporated after passing through it. THE HOTEL DETECTIVE. How He Thrives on the Vices and Weal nesses of Country Visitors. New York is the hotel detective. With one or two exceptions he is considerably worse than the average private detective. On ac-count of being connected with the hotel he has great facilities for making money in a doubtful sort of way. I heard a story of one of these fellows who had just been discharged, and it convinced me that the hotel detective can be a very dangerous person to deal with if he is devoid of principle. Being connected with the hotel he naturally learns all about the business of the guests, and has little difficulty in getting acquainted with them.

There is hardly an officer of the hotels who makes so much money as these detectives. Outside of their duties in looking out for the affairs of the hotels, they are allowed to act as guides in showing guests the dark ways of city life. Nearly every night a party of gen-tlemen get together who are desirous of seeing the city by gaslight and they engage the detective to pilot them about. For this he is paid very liberally by the gentlemen, and he is also paid something by the owners of the places where he takes them. This, of course, is a part of his business, but it gives him an opportunity to levy blackmail should be see fit. I know one detective who escorted a very nice old gentleman, who is one of the largest drygoods merchants in a prosperous southern city, to the Arion ball a few months ago. The old gentleman went simply out of curiosity. At home he is very pious, and is the superintendent of a Sunday school. In fact, he is considered a fauntic on religion.

After getting to the ball he was persuaded by the detective to drink a little wine. Not being used to it, it went to his head, and the old man possibly did one or two silly things, particularly for a Sunday school superin-tendent. On his way home be remarked to the detective that he would not have any one in his town know that he went to the ball for $1,000. Only a short time after his re-turn home he got a message from the detec-tive asking for the loan of $500. It was also intimated to him that should the request be refused an account of his conduct at the ball would be made public at his home. The merchant was weal, enough to send his check for $500. This detective has been guilty of a number of similar things which were nothing short of blackmail.—New York Cor. Richmond Dispatch.

Journalism in Mexico.

Compared with the journalism of other countries that of Mexico suffers in nearly every point except taking life easy. Until within five years, at any rate, the Mexican editor was a person of few cares and little business push. Foreign news he and his readers were content to receive by maildomestic intelligence found its way into print after the colonial method of letters of travelers or communications from provincia readers, local happenings appeared in the shape largely of rumors, sifted down grad-ually into some semblance of fact, not as a result of investigation at first hand, but of balancing and weighing the accumulating gossip. There was no system of reporting or interviewing, no "scoops," no news hot from the wires. Indeed, the morning papers were frequently for sixty. frequently for sale on the streets the evening before. From this enviable state, brought about in part by southern indolence, in part by the lack of means to rival the expensive lministration of an American newspaper, Mexican journalists are being gradually aroused. American competition on their own ground is one cause of disturbance, growing native and foreign demand for better methods is another. A half column of news from Europe and the United States by the Galveston cable was the first innovation. Now an agency furnishes about a column a day by telegraph from El Paso. Other improve-ments are coming in. One incident of the new order of things cannot fail to be a sharper struggle for existence which will, in time, kill off the more useless members of the newspaper society. As yet, however, Mexican editing continues to expend its strength in writing furious or flattering leaders about public men and affairs, and publishing the political and social gossip of the streets: it is only rubbing its eyes open to the importance of fresh and accurate news.

We must allude with brevity to what is really a great feature in Mexican journalism - the literary department. The feuilleton of the French papers is imitated, literary, musical, and dramatic criticism is largely indulged in, even Spanish jokes are not war ing. But the great outpouring of the native genius is in the form of poetry. It sweeps in like a deluge upon the editors, whom one would call luckless did they not like and encourage that sort of thing. One paper recently published a poem, "The Delirarm of Love," of such extravagantly high flown absurdity that the critic of another journal was moved to ridicule, and suggested that the poem should have been entitled "The Delirium of the Author," whereupon the first named paper admitted the justice of the strictures, averred that it was really forced to publish the verses, masmuch as they came to it highly recommended as the first essay of a beginner who ought to be encouraged. - New York

"I do not like to be overestimated," writes Ella Wheeler Wilcox. "I am a voluminous and forcible writer of verse, I know; but I am far from being great or first in the land What makes my work copied so is that I do so deeply feel the troubles and pains and aches and thrills of human beings. I enter into their lives, and so my work is warm.
"But it is not finished or polished work which will bear the scrutiny of time. This I lo not care for, as I wish to be helpful now. It is worth more to me than fame or gold. I want to deserve my happiness, and I can only do it by helping others. I cannot stop to write one artistic sonnet when six strong wild colts of poems come prancing over the meadows of my mind."-New York Journal.
